BIRGE IN AUTUMN

'Tis an autumnal eve,—the low winds sighing
To wet leaves rustling as they hasten by;
The eddying mist to tossing boughs replying
And then darkness filling all the sky;
The moon, pale mistress, pallid in solemn vapor,
The rack, swift-wandering through the void above
As I, mourner by my lonely taper
Send back to faded hours the plaint of love.
Blossoms of peace, once in my pathway springing
Where have your brightness and your splendor gone?
And thou whose voice came to me as singing,
What region holds thee in the vast unknown?
What star far brighter than the rest contains thee,
Beloved, departed,—Empress of my heart?
What bond of beauty enchains thee
In realms unveiled by pen or prophet's art?
Ah! loved and lost in these autumnal hours
When fairy colors deck the painted trees,
When the vast woodland seems a sea of flowers
O! then my soul exulting bounds to thee;
Springs as to clasp thee yet in this existence
Yet to behold thee at my lonely side;
But the fond vision melts at once in distance,
And my sad heart gives echo—she has died.
Yes, when the morning of her years were brightest,
That angel presence into dust went down;
While yet with rosy dreams her rest was lightest
Death for the Olive wove the cypress crown
Sleep which no waking knows o'er came her bosom,—
O'er came her large bright spiritual eyes;
Spared in her bowers conubial one fair blossom,—
Then bore her spirit to the upper skies.
There let me meet her when life's struggle's over;
The pure on love and thought their faith renew,
Where man's forgiving and redeeming lover
Spreads out his paradise to every view.
Let the wild autumn with its leaves descending
Howl on the winter's verge,—yet spring will come;
So my freed soul, no more 'gainst fate contending,
With all it loveth, shall regain its home.

To Be 100 per cent Efficient You Must Have 100 per cent Flow of Nerve Energy.

This is not possible if a nerve running from the spinal column is pressed upon.

To be in health, the stomach for instance, must receive 100 per cent flow of nerve energy.

We do not know that we are sick until our nerves propel the message to our brains. Then we feel pain or ill at ease.

By adjusting the spine at the point where the nerve is unhinged the pressure is relieved and you get 100 per cent flow of nerve energy.

Health invariably follows.
